We have a couple of options for you to consider, including great mini fridges for road trips and more. Check out the full list to see all our top picks! MORE FROM CONSUMERSEARCH.COM Using tupperware or other reusable containers to store leftovers is a smart idea. Not labeling those containers with their contents and when you stored them is a recipe for trouble. The fix is as easy as a box of dry erase crayons—they write on plastic containers easily, clean off quickly, and make labeling your leftovers so easy you'll actually do it. Dry erase crayons are affordable (this box of 8 at Amazon is $4), and as long as you stash one somewhere in the kitchen, you can drag it out before you stash the last of the crock pot chili in the freezer or bag up your homemade chicken broth, write the contents and the date on your tupperware container, and then put it away. The real beauty is that the dry erase crayons won't smear or smudge, and unlike grease pencils, markers, or even a bit of tape stuck to the container, the dry erase marker rubs right off when it's time to clean.Label Your Leftovers | Organizing Home Life via The Kitchn Activate and hold the button to confirm that you're human. Try a different method istockphoto.comWhiteboards have replaced blackboards in many classrooms and are also commonly used in workplaces and home offices. While they're a great tool for jotting down ideas or conveying information to a group, they have a tendency to become stained with heavy use. Cleaning your dry erase board regularly will keep it in good condition for years to come. If it does get stained, however, there are ways to make it look brand new again. Read on for four simple steps for how to clean a whiteboard.Tools & MaterialsBEFORE YOU BEGINBefore cleaning your whiteboard, first, establish what it's made of. Dry erase boards are typically made from melamine, porcelain, or glass. The most affordable and commonly available dry erase boards are made using melamine. Recommended cleaning methods are similar for all three materials, but certain chemical products may negatively affect whiteboards made from melamine, which can be porous. istockphoto.comHave you ever accidentally used a permanent marker to write on a dry erase board? If so, don't panic; it doesn't mean your whiteboard is ruined. Simply grab a fresh dry erase marker and draw over the stained area with it. Allow it to dry, then use a whiteboard eraser to remove the fresh markings, and the old stains should be erased in the process. If the stains are still visible, repeat the process for the best results. This trick also works to erase markings from dry erase markers that have stained the board. Keep in mind, however, that melamine boards are most susceptible to permanent staining and ghosting and may not respond to this technique.Related: How To Clean Painted WallsSTEP 2: Clean the board with a cleaning solution and a soft cloth.Once you've removed any visible stains, it's time to give the entire board a thorough cleaning. While you can use a specially formulated whiteboard cleaner like Expo Whiteboard Cleaner (available on Amazon), there are also a number of household products that you might already have in a drawer or cupboard that will get the job done. Rubbing alcohol, hand sanitizer, nail polish remover containing acetone, vinegar, and Windex are all safe to use on a whiteboard. To clean the whiteboard, dampen a cloth and use it to rub in the cleaning product of your choice. Rinse the cloth with cold water and use it to rinse off any remaining cleaning solution. istockphoto.comSTEP 3: Wipe the board with a damp cloth daily. The best practice for keeping your whiteboard clean is to erase any markings when you're done using it. Always wait until the markings have dried completely before erasing them to avoid ghosting, but note that markings that stay on the board for longer than a day or two are more likely to leave stains behind. This is particularly true for dry erase boards made from melamine. For everyday cleaning, simply use a felt whiteboard eraser. For a more thorough regular cleaning, a damp cloth will suffice. Use a clean, dry cloth to dry the board.STEP 4: Don't use abrasive cleaners that can damage the whiteboard surface.Abrasive cleaners like toothpaste, Comet, and baking soda all contain tiny particles that can scratch the surface of a dry erase board. Avoid using abrasive cleaners as well as wax-based solutions, which may leave a thin film on the whiteboard's surface. Similarly, avoid wiping a whiteboard with your bare hands because the oils from your skin can penetrate the surface and cause damage over time.Keeping a whiteboard clean may seem like an easy task, but regular maintenance is essential to ensure its longevity. By following these four steps, you'll be able to keep your dry erase board looking new for years to come.Related: How To Clean Plexiglass Activate and hold the button to confirm that you're human.
